

What is contribution splitting?

Contribution splitting allows you to transfer a portion of your super into your spouse's super boosting their retirement savings.

How does it work?

Before-tax contributions (such as employer contributions, salary sacrifice and personal contributions you claim as a tax deduction) made to your super can be split to your spouse's super account.

Contributions can be split regardless of your own age, but your spouse must be either:

- Less than preservation age, regardless of whether they're working or not
- Between their preservation age and 65, and not retired

If your spouse is 65 or older you cannot split your super contributions.

Once split, the amount is preserved in your spouse's super until they meet a condition of release to access it. Once a splitting application has been accepted it can't be revoked or returned to your super.

You'll need to speak to your super fund to confirm they offer contributions splitting and review any fees involved.

Any amount you split still counts towards your concessional contributions cap for the relevant year; it won't count towards your spouse's cap.

Timing

Contributions made between 1 July and 30 June in any financial year can be split from 1 July to 30 June the following financial year. You can only apply to split your contributions once in a financial year.

For example, pre-tax contributions made between 1 July 2019 and 30 June 2020 can be split by 30 June 2021 and you won't be able to split them thereafter.

If you plan to close your super account before the end of the financial year in which the contributions you wish to split were made, you can apply to split contributions from the super account(s) being closed in the same financial year prior to the withdraw or rollover of your benefits

If you intend to split a personal contribution that you are claiming a tax deduction for, a Notice of Intent form must be lodged and acknowledged by your super fund prior to the contribution split being processed. You may lodge a Notice of intent form at the same time as your contribution splitting form (but not later).

How much can you split?

The maximum amount of contributions that can be split with your spouse in any financial year is the lesser of:

- 85% of concessional contributions received by the fund for that financial year, and
- The concessional contributions cap for that financial year.

For more information on concessional contribution caps, refer to the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) at www.ato.gov.au

What amounts cannot be split?

Generally, you can't split any of the following amounts:

- after-tax (non-concessional) contributions
- any defined benefit contributions
- amounts rolled over from another fund
- benefits that may be subject to Family Law conditions
- any contributions if your spouse
 - is aged 65 or over, or
 - has reached preservation age (see table below) and has retired from the workforce
- your full account balance
- amounts that you wish to receive as a First Home Super Saver payment.

A more extensive list can be found on the ATO website at ato.gov.au

¹Assessable income includes ordinary income (excluding any assessable First home super saver released amount) such as bank interest, dividends and investment earnings (including rental income) commissions, total reportable fringe benefits amounts and reportable super contributions.

Meaning of 'spouse'

The definition of spouse includes a person (of any sex):

- you are legally married to
- you are in a relationship with that is registered under certain state or territory laws
- who lives with you on a genuine domestic basis in a relationship as a couple (known as a de facto spouse).

Preservation age

Preservation ages are outlined in the table below:

Date of birth	Preservation age
Before 1 July 1960	55
1 July 1960 – 30 June 1961	56
1 July 1961 – 30 June 1962	57
1 July 1962 – 30 June 1963	58
1 July 1963 – 30 June 1964	59
From 1 July 1964	60

Carry forward unused concessional contributions cap

From 1 July 2018, you may be able to carry forward any unused amount of your concessional contributions cap if you:

- have a Total Superannuation Balance of less than $500,000 on 30 June of the previous financial year, and
- are eligible to make concessional contributions.

The first year you will be able to access a higher concessional contributions cap (taking advantage of your unused portion for the previous year) is 2019/20. If you take advantage of this, an increased concessional contributions cap will be used to determine the maximum splittable amount.

View your Total Super Balance through the ATO via my.gov.au

Can I claim a tax offset when splitting contributions?

You won't be able to claim the spouse contributions tax offset for contributions split into a receiving spouse's account, as the amount is treated as a rollover, not a contribution. If you intend to claim a tax offset for eligible spouse contributions, those contributions must be made separately as an after-tax amount and paid directly to your spouse's super account. Refer to the 'What are spouse contributions' fact sheet.

Case study

Sam's employer contributed $15,000 to his super fund in 2021/21. Sam elects to split $10,000 of these contributions to his wife, Lucy's super fund in financial year 2021/22. Sam has confirmed his super fund allows contribution splitting and lodges the form with his fund. His super fund accepts the application and rolls $8,500² over to Lucy's fund.

Visit us at australianunity.com.au/advice or call 1300 700 189

Important information

This is a publication of Australian Unity Personal Financial Services Limited ABN 26 098 725 145 (AUPFS), AFSL 234459. Its contents are current to the date of publication only, and whilst all care has been taken in its preparation, AUPFS accepts no liability for errors or omissions. Tax rates and figures noted are valid for the 2020-21 financial year. The application of its contents of specific situations (including case studies and projections) will depend upon each particular circumstance. This publication is general in nature and has been prepared without taking into account the objectives or circumstances of any particular individual or entity. It cannot be relied upon as a substitute for personal financial, taxation, or legal advice. Published: June 2021 © Copyright 2020

2. Calculated as $10,000 less $1,500 (15% contributions tax) equal to $8,500 net amount rolled over.